

FIRST CITY SLACKER LIST MADE PUBLIC

General Bullard Gives Names
From Local Boards Nos.
164, 34 and 185.

OTHER LISTS TO FOLLOW

Brooklyn Court Asked to Quash Indictments Against 106 Accused.

Major-Gen. Robert L. Bullard, commanding the Second Corps area of the United States Army, made public yesterday the first of the lists of American war slackers prepared by the War Department. The list, which will be followed by others until the names of every man in New York who is considered a slacker by the Government has been published, gives the names of the men from Local Boards Nos. 164, 34 and 185, all in New York city.

The War Department has announced that before these lists were prepared for publication every effort was made to check up each case, and when any doubt at all existed as to whether a certain man was a slacker the man was given the benefit of that doubt. The Department's statement said that the names in the lists are slackers without doubt.

An instance of the efforts to do justice to the men on the registration lists came in Brooklyn yesterday, when Leroy W. Ross, United States Attorney, asked Judge Chatfield, in the United States District Court, to quash indictments against 106 men accused of being slackers.

Mr. Ross told Judge Chatfield that his investigations have shown that the names of those men were put on the slacker lists wrongfully, the mistake usually being made by the draft board because the men were actually in service when their names were called for the army. Mr. Ross has completed an investigation of the cases of 549 of the 2,300 men in Brooklyn suspected of being slackers. Bench warrants have been issued for eighteen, four have pleaded guilty and the cases of 462 have been turned over to the Department of Justice for further investigation.

The names issued by Gen. Bullard are as follows:

SCORES 'WRECKERS' IN SPORTING CLUB

Managing Director of International Says Few of 1,750 Members Are Complaining.

SOME WANT MONEY BACK

No Basis for Charge of Extravagance in Organization, Says W. A. Gavin.

William A. Gavin, managing director of the International Sporting Club, in a letter to THE NEW YORK HERALD yesterday says that of the 1,750 members who have joined the club and become $500 bondholders in the club corporation "there are at most a score who are dissatisfied, and some of these will continue to be dissatisfied unless we agree to repurchase their bonds before the time for their redemption."

"Others," continues Mr. Gavin, referring to the club members, "have become vindictive because we decline to accede to unreasonable demands in connection with their entertainments."

"Others seek representation on one or other of our committees; but the most implacable and unappeasable of all are those who joined the club with the express purpose of wrecking it."

"Thirty-nine per cent. of the members," Mr. Gavin says, "realize that the club is a sporting enterprise and not a commercial undertaking, and that the $500 bond is the modern substitute for an initiation fee." These members, he adds, consider it grossly unfair on the part of others to support a charge of extravagance in organization by representing that if $170,000 has been expended thus, then the obtaining of each member has cost $100 per head. This cost should be distributed over the duration of the average life of a club member, which Mr. Gavin puts at ten years, and the organization cost should also, he considers, be charged against the dues which a member must pay in during his membership life, in this case $1,000 for ten years at $100 each.

The cost of entertainments and other forms of publicity should not be charged against organization, Mr. Gavin says, nor the sums expended in staging "high class boxing entertainments which, in addition to furnishing amusement for our members, helped materially in raising the standard of the sport." Other expensive items have been the campaign for the legalizing of boxing and the "social and general uplifting of the sport."

Mr. Gavin says that no officer of the club has resigned because of "dissatisfaction in regard to the cost of organization or for any other financial reason. Books are kept, balance sheets regularly issued and every condition observed, and provision made to meet, should occasion arise, the attacks of those who are striving to retard the progress of the club."

WOMEN FLEE AS COPS RAID DEN; GET OPIUM

Drug Thrown From Window;
Two Chinamen Held.

Far to the east in Canal street, where at night automobiles get through the streets with difficulty because of the swarms of children in the street, there has been unusual interest of late in a ramshackle five story tenement. Big limousines groped their way through the crowded thoroughfare and debarked passengers. Some of them the children could see were richly dressed women. The visitors always stepped hastily into the doorway and disappeared. Many hours later the cars would come back for them.

The talk in the neighborhood became so audible that it reached the police, and early yesterday morning Detectives Hansen and Gorman raided the place. They broke in a door reinforced with iron, heard the screams of women, and as they entered saw the guests rushing to the fire escape and two Chinese throwing out of the window packages recovered later and said to be opium valued at $1,000.

Those left in the place were arrested. In Essex Market court Chung Lung and Chan Hung were held in $1,000 bail each for examination Friday on suspicion of possessing narcotics.

DROP CASE AGAINST FURRIERS.

On motion of United States Attorney Francis G. Caffey, Judge Learned Hand in the Federal District Court ordered yesterday that the case of A. N. Leventhal, furrier, of 8 West Thirtieth street, charged with attempting to evade full payment of the income tax, be nolle prossed.
